

Website Administrator's Report for the 2016 Fall Assembly

Please accept my apologies for not being able to attend the assembly today, but we will be returning from a vacation trip much later this evening. I do have some significant things to report, though.

On September 1 a new version of our website went live on aa-nia.org. It has all the same content as the old site, but works great on any device including phones and tablets. Hopefully you will find it easier and quicker to use. Your comments are always welcome – we are eager to hear how it's working for you once you've had a chance to become familiar with it. This is not the end, though. Now that the conversion has been made we can focus on refinements, so once again we welcome your ongoing feedback.

The NAATW (National AA Technology Workshop) for 2016 will be held in Winston-Salem NC on the weekend before Thanksgiving. Information and registration details may be found at naatw.org. Chances are good that I will be presenting at that conference a summary of our experiences with rebuilding our website with sustainability in mind. In the near future I can make that presentation at district meetings if any are interested.

Thank you to all who have supported our efforts at finding better ways to carry the message in this high tech age.
